The management of the village fund aims to improve the people's welfare through participatory and accountable governance. However, the village fund management in Moswaren Village still faces some issues, such as low capacity of its human resources, a lack of assistance, limited infrastructure, and a lack of people's participation. This situation shows the urgency of accountability, monitoring, and capacity strengthening to ensure the village fund is used precisely and brings a tangible impact. This study aims to analyze the management of the village fund at Moswaren Village of Moswaren District in Sorong Selatan Regency.

This study applied a descriptive qualitative method. This study consisted of four stages, beginning with the research preparation phase, data collection and research data analysis, and concluding with the phase of compiling the research findings. The data were collected from the primary and secondary data sources.

The result shows that the village fund management of Moswaren Village reflects the commitment toward the principles of participatory, accountability, and transparency in each stage of the management. Nevertheless, its effectiveness is still hampered by the low capacity of human resources, a lack of people's participation, limited digital infrastructure, as well as weak institutional capacity. Capacity strengthening of the apparatus, digitization of the system, and support of infrastructures are needed to create a more ethical, responsive, and sustainable management of the village fund. In addition, institutional strengthening and people's participation are also needed in the planning, capacity and professionalism improvement of the apparatus, the development of the information system and digital infrastructure, a transparent two-way communication mechanism, as well as synergy with the supervisory institution to bring about an accountable, ethical, and responsive management.
